I don't know if this is in the right place, but I couldn't think of where else to put it. I think it's time to get up and leave my Pentecostal church... Church services, pulpit preaching, including blatantly anti-Calvinist and similar comments, are becoming too much. Are there good reformed churches in the Phoenix, Arizona area? I've heard of it, but it's a bit far from my house - about 30 minutes drive, which is a bit annoying. However, one of my friends visits every Sunday morning - they have some church history lessons going on - and a local philosophy professor preaches there, so I'm definitely putting him in the most likely category... I just hope for something closer... I don't know if this is in the right place, but I couldn't think of where else to put it. I think it's time to get up and leave my Pentecostal church... Phoenix URC Thank you for the links! The church of the Compagnia della Grazia is 5 minutes from my house... I'm going to take a look at it for sure! Being new to it myself, I don't know if the Reformed Episcopal Church has anything near you that you might want to check out! My wife and I attended there for a few months. Gary Johnson is a man of God. I highly recommend it. Only it's about an hour away The Reformed Episcopal Church is also a long way off. It looks like either I'm going to fellowship fellowship Grace or Calvin OPC! Thank you all! -----Add on 2/10/2009 at 02:45:47 EST----- Another question: Are the reformed churches, for the most part, cessation? I've never been to any church, but light charismatics and Pentecostals (not hardcore ones, Romanians tend to be a bit liberal in their Pentecostalism), and so I don't know much about the medium and similar practices of other denominations. For the most part, the reformed churches are cessationist. There are some churches that are reformed on some or more points but would not cease.
